Organization and Program Overview:

Miami Music Project uses music as a tool for social transformation, empowering children to acquire values and achieve their full potential, positively affecting their society, through the study and performance of music.

Miami Music Project (MMP) is a local, non-profit arts and social development organization founded by world-renowned conductor James Judd in 2008, with the support of the John S. and James L. Knight Foundation's one million dollar Knight Arts Challenge Grant. Since its inception, MMP reached over 25,000 public school children and youth through its initial In-School Residency program.

In 2010, MMP developed and implemented its core music education programming inspired by the El Sistema phenomenon - a new model for social change and a visionary global movement that transforms the lives of children through music. Miami Music Project's El Sistema-inspired program has already achieved national prominence as one of the largest programs of its kind in the United States.

Designed as an intensive, tuition-free, after-school music program, MMP provides hundreds of children from at-risk demographics with fully integrated music curriculum, excellent training from professional musicians and music educators and opportunities for leadership and social development. Students participate across four community chapters located in under-served and immigrant communities (Little Haiti, Doral, Liberty City, and Little Havana) with distinct populations - predominantly African American, Haitian-American and Hispanic.

The chapters work in harmony to further a shared vision, goals, curriculum, repertoire and experiences. Additionally, students take part in ensemble-based community performances throughout the school year.

The program builds transferable practical skills needed to improve academic motivation, classroom success and social preparedness, and creates new avenues of cultural awareness. Ultimately, by enriching the lives of individual children and creating a network of stand-alone orchestras, the program seeks to create social change within Greater Miami's most vulnerable communities.
